Objectives:

- ◆ Sociology combines scientific and humanistic perspectives in the study of the structural and cultural dynamics that shape our everyday experiences and communities. It provides an important background for careers in communications, education, social work, criminal justice, and public administration.
- ◆ Students may select from a broad range of courses related to contemporary issues and problems: inter-group relations, popular culture, demographics, social movements and social change, modernity and post-modernity, family patterns and relationships, sports and leisure, sexuality, crime and deviance, environmental and social problems, and field experiences.
- ◆ Get more involved on campus! Join Circle K or Alpha Kappa Delta to meet other students also interested in this field. Contact the ROAR office at roar@uccs.edu or 262-3470 for information.
