

Research demonstrates that living in the residence halls for a student's first year in college provides significant likelihood that the student will return and complete their education. In order to improve our students' academic success and transition to college, UCCS administers an on-campus living requirement. First-year first-time students will be required to live on campus for their first two semesters (excluding summer term). Empirical research reveals seven areas in which residence halls have a significant impact on students (Blimling, 2003):

1. Retention – Students have greater expectations for academic achievement and are more likely to remain in college.
2. Extracurricular involvement – Students are more involved in campus activities. Students learn to work with others, manage budgets, express their ideas in meetings, negotiate with others, and follow through with projects.
3. Positive feelings about campus social climate – Students feel that the campus is more comfortable, academic, supportive, and enjoyable.
4. Personal growth and development – Students meet more challenges, mature more quickly and learn to become independent.
5. Interpersonal relationships – Students build strong friendships and share more experiences. They interact more, develop more tolerance, and experience more cultural diversity.
6. Faculty interaction – Students have more contacts with faculty in the residence halls and have a closer proximity to faculty offices.
7. Higher overall satisfaction with their college experience.
